ABSTRACT

This directory is one component of the Career Survival Kit prepared for teenage parents in Wisconsin. The directory lists resources in Wisconsin for education, employment, social services, and organizations in a variety of areas that can help students with their roles as parent/homemaker and wage earner/student. The directory identifies educational options and information, financial aid resources and programs for employment and training. Financial resources such as those provided by the federal and state governments and services from city or county departments of health and social services are described. Although the listings are specific to Wisconsin, they serve as illustrations of the help that is available throughout the United States. (KC)

RESOURCES YOU CAN TAP INTO

This section is a directory of resources throughout the state. The listings provide a variety of services in the following areas: education, employment, social services, and organizations in your community or at the state level.

An important part of being a successful single parent is being able to use the resources that are available to you. The first step in doing this is knowing what resources exist and the kinds of services they provide.

One goal of this section is to provide you with as many resources as possible to aid you in your efforts to balance your role as homemaker and parent with the demands of a job or school. It is also to let you know that there are people and places to help you with your responsibilities as a teen parent. You're not alone; there are many people who care and are anxious to help out.

Agencies are listed with addresses and phone numbers so that it is convenient for you to call for further information. It is sometimes difficult to just pick up the phone and call an organization and ask for information. Often people aren't sure about the kinds of questions to ask. If you think ahead of time what you want to know and write down some sample questions, it might make it easier and ensure that you get the information you are seeking.

The Department of Public Instruction and the University of Wisconsin-Madison Vocational Studies Center are not recommending or endorsing any of these agencies or organizations. The authors wish simply to provide a directory of resources so that you are aware of your choices for support.

I. EDUCATION

There are many educational resources in Wisconsin that provide education and training. Schools and colleges have counselors who are trained to help you decide on the kind of program for which you are best suited. Deciding on a program for further education takes time and careful thought.

If you want to make a decision about further education and training, talk to your teachers, counselors, and your family and friends about what choices you have. Ask lots of questions about how to apply, what kinds of programs are available, and where you can get additional information so that you have as much information as possible before making a decision on a program.

Many schools provide financial aid to help pay for your studies. Find out what programs are available to you for funding sources. For further information contact your school counselor, teachers, principal, or the financial aids office at any of the institutions listed below. The Wisconsin Career Information System's Wisconsin Student Financial Aid and Job Hunting Workbook provides much of the information you need to apply for financial aid.

Make the classes you are taking now count as much as possible so that you are better prepared for further education and training later on. By developing good study habits now you will increase your chances for successful learning and working later.

EDUCATIONAL OPTIONS

Getting additional education and training beyond the high school diploma will enhance your chances of finding and keeping better paying and more rewarding jobs. Thinking in the long-term and planning for your future beyond the next year is one way to plan for your life as an adult and parent.

You will probably need some kind of training to get a job that pays well enough to support yourself and your child. Education is an important part of finding and keeping good jobs. You can get the training you need by completing high school and considering other educational options such as vocational school, apprenticeships, two-year programs, or four-year colleges.

Deciding about a program and what best suits your needs is a difficult and time-consuming task. Some factors you will want to consider are:

-how much time will a program take to complete

-what are the financial costs

-how will I take care of myself and my child while getting the training I need

-where can I get more information about programs

-who should I talk to before making a decision

-where are schools located that offer the kind of training I want

You might want to use the exercises in the Decision-Making section to help you make some choices about education. Choosing a plan for continuing your education is a good example of an important decision to make. Using a planned approach for making the decision will help you sort out the facts.

The Wisconsin Career Information System (WCIS) is your resource to help you make decisions about further education and training. Areas addressed by WCIS include career exploration, career decision-making, understanding the world of work, developing work attitudes, and integrating world of work information into general and vocational programs.

WCIS is a comprehensive labor market information source for Wisconsin and the nation, a career exploration system, a career assessment system, an education program planning system, and a resource system for students, counselors, teachers, and administrators.

WCIS products for high school students include SCAN and CAREER SCAN I, Micro-Skills, The Occupations and Education Handbooks, the WCIS Crosswalks, the Full-System Microcomputer Version of WCIS.

Use these resources to help guide you in your decisions for education and employment. Talk to your teachers and counselors about how to use these materials.

There are different kinds of educational programs to consider. There is short-term training, one- or two-year programs, a four-year bachelor's degree program, and apprenticeships. Some will need a high school diploma. Some programs for employment and training don't require a diploma.

Short-term programs last less than a year and prepare you for one specific occupation. They may be in your high school, a local college, community colleges, vocational schools, business colleges, or private, proprietary schools. Some occupations you might be trained for are key punch operator, travel agent, motorcycle mechanic.

One- or two-year programs may provide a certificate, a diploma, or an associate degree for this training. These programs may be found at vocational schools, business colleges, community colleges, two-year centers, or four-year colleges. Examples of occupations are police officer, accountant, or child care worker.

Four-year colleges and universities offer more than specific training for a career. They also give you a chance to learn about yourself and the world around you. At a college or university you may obtain a four-year bachelor's degree. After you graduate you may decide to go on for a master's degree or a doctorate. Some occupations which usually require a bachelor's degree are teacher and journalist.

Apprenticeships teach a skilled trade while you are working. For more information about apprenticeships see the section on Higher Wage Occupations.

The following information explains the kinds of degrees, certificates, etc. that you can receive from the various educational programs in Wisconsin.

Baccalaureate Degree (BA, BS, etc.)

Baccalaureate Degree, often called a Bachelor's Degree, is granted by a college or a university after a person has met the requirements for graduation.

It usually requires about 4 years of college work to earn this degree. The Baccalaureate Degree can be granted in one of many fields of study, such as sciences (Bachelor of Sciences), or liberal arts (Bachelor of Arts).

Master's Degree (MA, MS, etc.)

The Master's Degree is an advanced degree granted by a college or a university after a person has met the requirements of the degree program. A person is usually required to have a Bachelor's Degree before being accepted into a Master's Degree program. The Master's Degree usually requires a person to study at a college or a university about 3 semesters, or about 2 additional years, after earning a Bachelor's Degree. Like the Bachelor's, the Master's Degree can be granted in one of many fields of study.

Doctorate Degree

The Doctorate Degree is one of the highest degrees that colleges or universities can grant. It is granted to people who have successfully completed school work and an original research paper called a thesis. Most people plan to study for a Doctorate Degree for 3 to 5 years, which includes the time it may take to write the thesis.

Many people working toward a Doctorate Degree go to school part-time while working at their regular job.

People may earn a Doctorate Degree in one of many fields of study, such as law, school administration, social work, or engineering.

The Medical Doctor (M.D.), Doctor of Veterinary Medicine (D.V.M.), or Doctor of Dental Science (D.D.S.), are degrees given to those who have completed a special course of study in one of these fields of health.

Associate Degree (A.A., A.S.)

An Associate Degree is usually granted to people who complete a 2-year study program. These programs are offered at vocational/technical schools or 2-year colleges, and are often known as college parallel programs.

In Wisconsin there are four types of Associate Degree programs approved by the Wisconsin State Board of Vocational, Technical and Adult Education: (1) Associate of Applied Arts, (2) Associate of Applied Science, (3) Associate of Arts, and (4) Associate of Science.

Diploma

A diploma is a document of recognition granted to a student for successful completion of an approved program as measured by a certain number of credits. A diploma verifies the skills a person has learned through completion of a vocational education program or a formal education level achieved, such as high school or college.

Certificate

A certificate is a document of recognition which may be granted to a student for successful completion of a portion of an approved vocational program or for completion of an approved occupational program with less than minimum program requirements.

A certificate verifies that the student has taken courses within a certain program area, but has not completed the full program requirements. Remember, a certificate is not the same as certification. If a person holds a certificate of completion of courses, it does not necessarily mean that the person is certified to perform a certain skill.

Continuing Education Unit

Continuing education is a term for classes or courses taken in order to keep up with changes in the way skilled jobs must be performed.

Continuing education is often required by employers at these jobs. Some employers hire teachers to teach the classes at a vocational/technical school.

License

A license is a document which permits a person to perform a service or to sell a product. In order to obtain a license, the applicant has to meet certain standards set down by the government. Usually, persons who perform a service, such as a doctor, dentist, or real estate agent, must take an exam and/or talk to the members of the examining board to insure that they are qualified to perform the service. Persons who want to sell a product must obtain a license for taxation and public safety purposes. A license is granted by a township, village, city, or state. A record of the license is kept by the government, which may require renewal after a certain time. A fee is charged for the license and for renewal.

GED - General Equivalency Diploma

The General Equivalency Diploma is granted for completion of a high school (or similar) program offered to people who did not receive a regular high school diploma.

This program is for people who are not of high school age. After successfully completing courses that apply to a high school diploma, these people must take an examination to qualify for the GED. The examination measures: (1) correctness and effectiveness of expression, (2) understanding of reading materials in the social studies, (3) understanding of reading materials in the natural sciences, (4) understanding of literature, and (5) general math ability.

These tests may be given in English, French, or Spanish. Braille and taped versions of the tests are available for handicapped people. Each test takes about two hours to complete.

In 1978, GED tests were available in twelve high schools, five universities, two colleges, 37 VTAE schools, the Adult Basic Education (ABE) programs, seven correctional schools, two veteran hospitals, and at the Department of Public Instruction (DPI). Not every high school in Wisconsin administers the GED tests.

Admissions

Colleges, universities, vocational-technical schools, private training schools, and other schools of higher education often require that students meet certain requirements before they can enroll.

Admission requirements are necessary to help the school know whether or not the student is qualified to begin the course work. The school may ask for information such as a record of high school work and grades, proof of high school graduation, an entrance examination, an application fee, a health examination, or letter(s) of recommendation. Write or call the admissions office of the school of your choice for an application form. Check your guidance office or library for a school catalog which will list the admission requirements.

College Parallel Programs/Transfer Courses

A college parallel program is a 2-year course of study at a college or institution which does not grant a Bachelor's Degree. Students can transfer credits they earn in these courses to a college that does grant a degree.

A transfer course is a course taken at a 2-year college or institution for which a student can get credits at a 4-year college. However, all transfer courses may not be accepted for credit at a specific school. It is very important to check with the office of Student Services at the specific school, or with the department you want to major in, to be sure that the courses you want to take at a 2-year school can be transferred for credit. Also, most schools have a limit on the total number of credits that will be accepted for transfer.

School Transcript of Credits

A school transcript is an official copy of a student's education record at a school. When a student applies for admission to another school, a transcript is usually required. The transcript information may be used to judge whether a student is qualified to do further course work in another school. A transcript usually includes the courses and credits the student has completed. A transcript may also include the grades for each course, a record of absences and tardiness and other information about student activities, awards, or special testing records.

If you want a school to receive your transcript, you must ask your present school to mail it. See your counselor if you need help.

Career Education

Career education is a term for home, school, or community activities designed to help people better understand themselves and others, the world of work, and the American economic system. Career education includes orientation to occupations, exploration of job opportunities, planning for jobs, and career preparation through education and training.

Vocational Education

Vocational education is instruction in basic and advanced technical skills, basic math and verbal skills, and physical dexterity skills. These are some of the skills needed by adults who want to enter the job market, or advance in their present job.

Occupations requiring vocational education are found in all areas of work. The skills required vary from job to job, depending on the work to be done, the knowledge required, and the techniques needed to do the job safely and well.

Vocational education in Wisconsin is taught at the high school level and at the college/technical school level. The vocational programs vary in length from a few weeks to two years.

College Prep

College preparation is a term for any course or school program that helps a student get ready for college studies. This term can be used to describe a type of school, the goal of a school, a school program, extracurricular activities, or training programs.

Some colleges work closely with public and private high schools to recommend high school courses that will be useful to students who plan to attend college. Often, these courses will give the student basic knowledge that will be needed for college course work.

ABE - Adult Basic Education

Adult basic education is instruction for adults who are not legally required to be enrolled in school. The instruction is below the college level for adults who have not graduated from high school. Many vocational classes are offered as part of adult basic education programs.

Adult basic education courses help people improve their speaking, writing, and reading skills. This often improves their ability to get or hold a job, be more productive in their work, and to handle responsibility.

Technical or vocational schools usually offer these courses on their campuses at hours that are convenient for working adults.

The following information lists other educational institutions and offices where you can get further information to help you make a decision about additional training.

The Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction is the state office that provides guidelines for public school education programs. Funds have been provided to develop special programs for teenage single parents. Programs exist around the state and provide a variety of resources for teen parents. FINANCIAL AID INFORMATION

The office of Student Financial Aid on each campus can provide you with information on grants and loans to help pay for your education. There are forms that must be filled out during the year before you plan to attend the university. Contact your school counselor if you are interested in more information about how and when to apply for admission and financial aid. Also see the WCIS Wisconsin Student Financial Aid and Job Hunting Workbook.

There are several types of financial aid. Some forms of assistance, such as scholarships and grants, are considered "gift" assistance and do not have to be repaid. Long-term loans, on the other hand, are just that--loans--and must be repaid. However, repayment is usually deferred until the student leaves school. Another type of assistance is work-study employment; the amount offered through this program must be earned by the student.

All students must meet the following requirements to receive financial assistance through aid programs administered by the University of Wisconsin. A student must:

-be a citizen or permanent resident of the United States

-be admitted to the University of Wisconsin in a degree program

-show financial need as determined by the Financial Aid Office

-maintain satisfactory academic progress

-be enrolled on at least a half-time basis

-meet the eligibility requirements of each of the aid programs he or she accepts

- not be in default on any educational loan, show an unwillingness to repay any educational loan, or owe any refund on a grant or loan

- register with the Selective Service if he is at least 18 years of age and born after December 31, 1959

Scholarships are given in recognition of a student's achievement. Some scholarships require both academic excellence and financial need, while others are based entirely upon scholastic performance.

Grants are gifts of assistance and do not have to be repaid. All grants are awarded on the basis of financial need. Superior academic performance is not required to receive a grant.

The University of Wisconsin-Madison has the Child Care Tuition Assistance Program. It provides up to $300 per academic year to students with children to assist them in paying child care costs. Payments are made directly to the day care provider. To apply for this program, contact the Financial Aid office. Although eligibility is based on financial need, students need not meet all the general eligibility requirements.

Loans are awarded by the University on the basis of financial need as determined by the Financial Aid office. Each loan program has specific eligibility criteria, repayment, cancellation, and/or deferment conditions.

The College Work-Study Program award is the offer of employment to assist you in financing part of your educational costs. The amount of financial assistance offered to you in the form of a Work-Study job reflects the maximum amount of money you will be eligible to earn under the Work-Study Program. This does not necessarily mean that you will actually earn the entire amount during the academic year. Your earnings are determined by the rate of pay associated with your job and the number of hours you work per week.

The 1987-88 Single Undergraduate Budget

These figures are estimates and may change according to campus, tuition, and rises in the cost of living. It provides you with an idea of what it costs for an academic year (9 months) of study. These figures are based on the University of Wisconsin-Madison costs. Other University campuses may vary.

Tuition & Fees	$1,820
Books & Supplies	330
Room & Board	2,900
Miscellaneous & Travel	1,150
Total	$6,200

Note: With a child you will have to add costs for child care, food, clothing, etc. to this estimated budget. Consult with your school counselor about making these estimates.

With loans, grants, and work-study it is possible to pay for a university degree. The more information you get from people to help you make a decision, the better decision you will make for yourself about attending college. It takes determination, motivation, and lots of hard work, but it's worth it for your own personal growth and for your financial and job security.

WISCONSIN INDEPENDENT COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

The Wisconsin Independent Colleges and Universities are the private schools for higher education. These are different from the University of Wisconsin Centers because they are funded by private rather than state monies.

There are nineteen private colleges and universities in Wisconsin. They are listed at the end of this section on private education. For more information on the kinds of programs offered, the address and phone numbers are provided so you can contact the Office of Admissions.

Private colleges and universities have four major sources of financial aid:

-federal government
-state government
-independent college or university
-local community

As a student at an independent college, you can apply to any or all of these sources for grants, loans, scholarships, or work-study.

Depending upon your financial need, you could receive as much as $2,172 through the Wisconsin Tuition Grant Program for your tuition at an independent college or university in Wisconsin.

There is also the Minority Grant Program which provides up to $2,500 per year to minority students already enrolled in Wisconsin's 19 independent colleges and universities. The goal of the program is to help ease the financial burden that minority students encounter as they pursue their postsecondary education during their sophomore, junior, and senior years.

You are eligible for this program if you are:

-a Wisconsin resident,
-Black, Hispanic, or Native American,
-of sophomore status or above at any of Wisconsin independent colleges, and
-in financial need.

For more information you can contact the financial aid offices at the independent colleges listed below or the Wisconsin Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, 121 E. Wilson Street, Madison, Wisconsin 53703, (608) 256-7761.

The independent colleges and universities offer numerous programs for adult students. Designed to offer adults the flexibility to accommodate their work schedules and home responsibilities, the adult programs offer the opportunity to begin a bachelor's degree or master's degree program, complete a degree program, or continue academic or enrichment learning.

Programs such as weekend colleges, evening degree completion programs, off-campus degree programs, lifelong learning and continuing education programs are available.

For information on any of these programs, contact the campus admissions office on any one of the campuses.

II. RESOURCES FOR EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING

This next section will discuss some of the employment projects in Wisconsin that are designed to help teen parents learn skills that will get them jobs and discover careers.

If there are projects in your area be sure to contact them for further information on how you can participate. There is much to gain from learning new skills and getting work experience. It also helps to have these experiences on your resume when you apply for other jobs.

Participating in employment projects shows an employer that you are committed to being responsible for yourself and your child and that you can be counted upon as an employee.

TEEN PARENT EMPLOYMENT PROJECTS
DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND SOCIAL SERVICES

The Wisconsin Department of Health and Social Services provides employment and training to teen parents in selected counties.

The programs are specifically for teen parents and are designed to assist teen parents obtain job skills and training to seek, obtain, and keep employment. They include only teen parents as participants. You can write or call to get information on exactly what training is offered.

Listed below are the projects, the contact person, and the counties served.

JOB TRAINING PARTNERSHIP ACT (JTPA)

Many high schools in the state have funds for job training. The Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) program trains youth for the workplace. JTPA often works with private industry to provide job training for entry into the labor force. Teens who are from low-income families are eligible to participate in JTPA. Teen parents are also eligible.

JTPA will teach you what it's like to work on a job site and provides training in job skills. Classes are provided in school and on-the-job to high school youth. Some of the benefits of JTPA are that it can give you job-related experience, you will develop positive work habits, and will have references to use later when you apply for other jobs.

If you are interested in more information about JTPA and the kinds of things you can learn from it, check with your school counselor. She or he can help you to find out how to apply. Your local Job Service office will also have information on JTPA programs.

Another way to get more information about JTPA is by contacting the program itself. Each JTPA program has what is called a Service Delivery Area (SDA). The map on the next page shows how the state is divided into areas. Numbers are assigned to each area. The number identifies the Service Delivery Area. For each SDA there is a contact person. A list of names and phone numbers follows the map. You can contact these people for more information about eligibility and what the program provides for training. Although each area has different training programs some of the skills you can learn are:

-how to look for a job
-job counseling
-on-the-job training
-training programs offered by labor organizations
-programs of advanced career training
-training programs from private industry

-programs to develop positive work habits
-vocational exploration
-pre-apprenticeship programs

These are only a few of the services provided and they are different depending upon where you live. Your local Service Delivery Area (SDA) Executive Director can tell you more about the kind of program offered in your area.

When you call to ask for a description of the JTPA services in your area, tell the Director that you are a teen parent and are interested in more information about participating in JTPA.

SINGLE PARENT & HOMEMAKERS PROJECTS
WISCONSIN BOARD OF VOCATIONAL, TECHNICAL AND ADULT EDUCATION

The Wisconsin Board of Vocational, Technical and Adult Education has projects for single parents to provide employment training and other skills related to the workforce. Listed below are some current projects and contact persons who can give you information about enrollment and eligibility for participating.

These projects are for women 16 years and older who are single parents and who are no longer in school. These projects were funded for 1985. There will be little change for 1986 and the contact persons will most likely remain the same.

If there is a project in your area, call the contact person and ask for more information about how to apply. It is an opportunity for you to get training in work-related areas that could open up new experiences for you.

For more information on programs in your community contact the department listed below nearest your home or you can call:

For other kinds of employment training programs in your community contact your local Job Service office. They can provide you with information on the various opportunities available. Each community may have different programs based on the local needs for training.

WISCONSIN EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES PROGRAM
DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND SOCIAL SERVICES

The Wisconsin Employment Opportunities Program (WEOP) is a state program that can -help you find a job,

-lead to job openings,
-help you learn how to keep a job,
-help find an employer to train you,
-help you receive classroom training, and provide you with work opportunities.

Depending on your personal situation, WEOP may:

- teach you the special skills you need to look for and get a job;
- help you find job openings and learn more about employers in your community;
- get support from others in the program who are also looking for a job;
- pay some of your transportation expenses while looking for a job;
- give you special training if you do not have the skills or experience for the available jobs--either in the classroom or on the job;
- refer you to other special services to help you prepare for and find employment.

If you are on AFDC you may be required to participate in WEOP. You do not have to participate in WEOP if:

- you are under 16 years of age,
- you are a full time student 16 to 18 years of age,
- you care for a child under 6 years old in your home,
- your spouse is already registered for WEOP,
- you are already working more than 129 hours per month,
- you live more than one hour away from the WEOP office with available transportation,
- you are needed at home to care for someone who is ill,
- you have a medical certificate that states you are incapacitated,
- you have a temporary illness,
- you are at least in the seventh month of pregnancy.

For more information about WEOP contact your Department of Health and Social Services county social worker.

III. SOCIAL SERVICES RELATED TO TEEN PREGNANCY & PARENTING

The state of Wisconsin and the Department of Health and Social Services (DHSS) has a number of offices and programs serving teens and parents in a variety of ways. Some of these services provide financial support, others provide information and support through training and education. The following list of resources gives only the basic information about the programs. Further information will be made available when you contact directly the office providing the service.

AID TO FAMILIES WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN PROGRAM (AFDC)

You may be eligible for AFDC benefits as a single parent. The program is designed to provide support for children without fathers living in the home or to families which are unemployed.

AFDC provides financial benefits for housing, food, clothing, utilities and other items. Eligibility is based on your income and what you own. For example, income such as cash, savings and checking accounts, stocks or bonds may not exceed $1,000 per family. You may own an automobile valued at no more than $1,500.

Your benefits are based on both earned and unearned income according to a standard scale depending on the number of people (including you, your child or children). Income up to $75 per month for work-related expenses (for example, transportation), and up to $160 per month per child for child care expenses, is not counted as income when you are being considered for benefits. That means that if you are employed, you can earn $160 per child and $75 per month for work-related expenses and still earn the full benefit from AFDC.

You receive a monthly payment of $463 for two people, $544 for three people according to the size of your family. You are automatically eligible for Medical Assistance if you are eligible for AFDC.

Medical Assistance pays for health care services including hospital services, laboratory and x-ray, and physician services.

If you are living with your parents you may not be eligible for AFDC. Wisconsin has a new law which makes the grandparents of the child financially responsible for the grandchild until s/he is 18 years old. That means that your parents and those of the father of your child are financially responsible as determined by the courts, for the care of your child.

To apply for AFDC, contact your county Department of Health and Social Services for a form. When you fill it out the responses will be verified by a staff person and you can receive benefits as soon as one week after application.

If you are eligible for AFDC, you may be required to participate in the Wisconsin Employment Opportunities Program. For more information about WEOP see the previous section under employment and training.

WOMEN, INFANTS AND CHILDREN (WIC) PROGRAM

The WIC Program provides food supplements to women up to six months after the birth of a child and to infants and children up to their 5th birthday. It is funded through the Department of Agriculture's Food and Nutrition Service in the Supplemental Food Program Division.

The program is for those mothers and children who are certified as "nutrition risks." You can receive nutrition education and food such as milk, eggs, etc. to help provide a balanced diet for you and your child.

Call your county Department of Health for more information about the program. Ask how you can apply for the program and if you are eligible.

FOOD STAMP PROGRAM

The Division of Community Services, Wisconsin Department of Health and Social Services, funds the Food Stamp program to help families buy the food they need for healthy diets.

Food Stamps can be used as money for purchasing groceries at most grocery stores.

To be eligible for Food Stamps you must:

1. File an application
2. Have an interview with a Food Stamp worker
3. Register for work in some cases

4. Not have more than $1,500 in cash or property

5. Meet the requirements for income and dependents in your household.

To get Food Stamps contact your local Division of Community Services at the Department of Health and Social Services in your county.

The county offices for the Department of Health and Social Services are listed next.
